Anglican Women Evangelicals:
Supporting our Ordained Ministry

Rev. Rosie Ward

Mentoring: an empowering relationship

Leadership can be challenging, and within AWESOME we have always wanted to find ways we can support each other as ordained women. It's really valuable to have people alongside to encourage, and to talk things through with. And all the research about how to develop as a leader suggests that having a mentor is one key. In this workshop we'll explore how to get the best out of a mentoring relationship, whether as a mentee or a mentor.

Leading in a broken church: Workshops

Rev. Jane Morris

Jane Morris is newly retired from her most recent role as vicar of St Gabriel's Church in north London. She was among the first women ordained priest, only a minority of whom came from an evangelical background. Jane has been part of the life and leadership of various churches. She helped set up New Wine in the north of England and served for some years on the leadership team of New Wine in London and the South East. She has also been a member of General Synod, helping with the leadership of the Evangelical Group. Jane has been involved in speaking, leading and encouraging others in many areas of Christian life and faith. She is passionate about the church, about growing vegetables and attempting to keep fit.

CARING FOR OURSELVES

In this time we will look at a whole vase full of flowers, from which each person might want to pick one or two to reflect on. How do we grow in all-round practical wisdom in understanding and caring for ourselves whilst we serve and care for others? Whose expectations surround us? How do we prioritise and do pace-setting in the real world? How do we continue to grow ourselves whilst seeking to grow others? How do we have realistic but God-inspired vision when we live within the boundaries of time?

Rev. Laura Hewitt

Laura Hewitt is Vicar of St James New Barnet. Laura has been ordained for sixteen years and in that time, she has led churches in various contexts. Most of Laura's ministry has been up in the north, where she led a benefice of two churches on the edge of Scarborough. Laura then moved to lead and develop a team of five churches all of different traditions in Billingham. During her time leading multi church parishes and benefices she found ways to enable renewal and develop teams working with different traditions. Laura has a heart for renewal and enabling others to reach their full potential for Jesus.

At this seminar Laura will share her experience of leading various traditions and multi-churches in these contexts include a time of sharing together so we can glean ideas from each other. The subjects will include: 1. How to communicate across churches. 2. When you can draw them together, when you can't. 3. How to work your time across multi churches, looking after yourself. 4. How to manage many churches without losing the vision of mission.
